Hi,

I listened to the endless discussion of noise and possible noise and find it off the mark: birds, frogs, car horns, music, hours for music etc. Actually all human created sound etc. is sound and therefore annoying. We could call it added sound, added to what we already have.

At this time we live in the absence of human created sounds at Wake Robin. And it is very peaceful. That is the only condition of peacefulness.

One should remember that we live on a highway with constant traffic and occasional sirens from ambulances. That should be considered enough for humans have to endure.

In my opinion, It is not proper to deliberately add to what we already endure.
